The Doc Mitchell Incident.The establishment of a high school should be considered in the city of Be'er Sheva, according to a Knesset member from Yachad. "Be'er Sheva is in need of a high school," Amir Ohana said on Monday. The cities of Netanya, Ashkelon and Eilat all have high schools, he noted. Ohana was speaking at the US House of Representatives about Israel's role in the war on ISIS. He went on to point out that a high school should be established in the city due to the fact that the Etzion Bloc - a community of people who immigrated from Iraq, Sudan, Afghanistan, among other parts of the world – are over-represented in the city. Ohana said that “if Israel is prepared to take a step and carry out a project that creates thousands of new jobs and provides thousands of new educational opportunities, then the government should state plainly its support for the establishment of a high school in the city.” Israeli law forbids the appointment of community heads and heads of educational institutions by the Education Ministry. In Israel, municipal school board committees play the main role in the appointment of schools head, while the state Education Ministry is responsible for the general supervision of schools. There are plans to open a high school in the Negev desert town of Hebron, in conjunction with the local community. Despite Arab opposition, there are plans to open a school in the city of Afula, as well as several other area. The Knesset Research and Information Center (KRC) keeps a database on projects such as these. Among the most important aspects of local education, according to KRC figures, are the education of girls in the Arab sector. In 2001, the municipal library in f988f36e3a
