What's New In RepView?

RepView is a small, yet efficient utility whose main purpose is to load Delphi Quick Report files, which can be managed from within the application with the utmost ease. General guidelines: RepView was designed to handle files in QRP format exclusively. It comes as a more agreeable way of analyzing the contents of such containers without putting much effort into it. One of the most popular ways of viewing QRP files is to drop the TQuickRep component on the desired form and make use of the Quick Reports toolbar to load its contents during project execution. However, this is an approach oriented towards advanced users and requires the presence of Quick Reports, whereas RepView excludes dependencies of any sort.

Installation and usage: RepView is wrapped inside a lightweight package and does not pose significant issues during setup, except for the part where it proposes a set of third-party applications that are not related to the program's functionality. The best course of action is to decline this offer. The main window of the program is extremely basic and cannot be resized to larger dimensions, but can be maximized. Many of its functions become visible only after you load a QRP file and these include (aside viewing), printing and exporting the contents to other formats such as XLS, PDF, WMF and so on. Final thoughts: Despite accomplishing its purpose, RepView lacks in many aspects. A better user interface, coupled with more extensive management options, including richer support for export formats could make it a little bit more appealing. Animated Grips is a handy tool for the WYSIWYG editor. It lets you insert text or HTML code containing multiple images. The selection procedure is based on the latest HTML5 specifications.

Microforms is a powerful Java Library that takes care of all type of Microforms, and integrates with Jasper Reports and ADO components. MarreDuc is an intuitive project management software designed to facilitate workflow and collaboration in any kind of project, it also has the ability to synchronize and synchronize between multiple platforms. Documentum OpenText is an integrated document and file management system that is widely used by enterprises around the world to serve corporate users and customers, and is now being used by thousands of U.S. colleges and universities to support student research. Ezgdb is an Integrated GUI Debugger which supports the embedding of GDB inside the application for native debugger and provides a true point and click environment. The application is fully based on Delphi technology. Digital Insight is a CMS for small and medium businesses. It is built on the Drupal content management system and runs on the LAMP architecture. It is also available as a professional service with an enhanced version called Insight. Datadog allows you to monitor the
