What's New in the EGPM?

EGPM is a Project Management tool designed to support the business goals of you and your team. It is designed to be more than a simple project management tool - it is the tool to help you manage your projects the way you want to. The program works in three windows: The main window, in which you can start a project or view an existing project. The 'Tasks' window, which holds a task (project) currently open for editing. The 'Reports' window, which contains the project reports that have been created so far. The program works by letting you assign and specify tasks to other people. The list of people is known as a 'Role'. You can create roles for different people with different access levels. Each role can have a different title and list of tasks assigned to it. A user can assign themselves a role, and will have a list of tasks assigned to them, or if the person wants they can make themselves a member of a group. You can create your own project reports, or create more standardised reports such as a cost report, a product list report and a project status report. Once you have created a report it can be emailed to you or another person and will arrive in the format that you specify in the email (Email Format, which is configured in the program Options). You can search through your project reports for one or more keywords using the FIND menu in each report. The program is now in public beta and will be free to non-commercial customers. The program has a simple yet powerful help system, allowing you to view help content without installing the program. EGPM has a completely resizable layout, meaning that the windows can be set in any size. It also uses a standard Windows' transparent scrollbar.
