It's only a small role, but an important role the Blend tool can play in your graphic design workflow. It's the mechanism that combines, isolates, and applies a virtual paint brush composed of two or more color swatches. It's perfect for erasing unwanted textures or transparencies, or for blending and compositing images at different densities. The Fill tool, formerly the Paint Bucket tool, fills any solid area with the color of your choice. It's great for solid backgrounds or coloring large areas. It can also be used to apply patterns to your images. The Gradient tool within the Fill tool lets you create a nice, faded background effect of the color of your choice. What It Does: The Restart command tears down the current document state and then restarts it from scratch, which means all of your custom color settings are reset. It magically restores all of your customized sliders back to their default values . Be careful, though. Tearing a document down and then starting over can be extremely dangerous depending on the amount of work you have put into that document. Always work on a copy of your document for safety.

The Undo command lets you quickly reverse any operation you have just made, restoring a previous state of your document-within-a-document. You can go back to any point you've ever worked on and revert your changes.

Since Undo is a reverse operation, the process remembers your undo. Reversing the operation isn't identical to reversing the undo operation, so be careful and only undo half of a complicated update.

You probably won't want to redo the whole thing, as it will produce a completely different document.

Once you have undone an operation, make sure to Save & Close the document in case you need to undo it again.
