The review is not about the program quality or effectiveness. The purpose of this review is to share our personal experience and thoughts on certain issues. It is possible that a user will not agree with our comments or will find some of them irrelevant. This should not be an issue. After all, this is what reviews are about: sharing opinions. There is a completely false impression that Windows users should move to Linux and Mac users should move to Windows. I would like to help everyone with a simple answer. In case you're a Windows user and want to convert to Linux, you will need to learn Linux and find out the best Linux OS for you. Then you can use Linux for what it is best at – being a general purpose operating system. In the case of Mac users, if they want to move to Windows, they will need to learn Windows and find out the best Windows OS for them. Then they can use Windows for what it is best at – being a general purpose operating system. You can move to Linux or Mac by choice, but you must learn both Linux and Mac first. Some users do not like to read and use manuals. This is normal. After all, a manual is meant to be read. However, the lack of manuals can be extremely frustrating. You have to solve a problem on your own without any instructions. Some manuals have too many steps and too many difficult terms and expressions. This is also normal. I have met many people with the following negative attitude towards manual computers: “Why should I read a manual? I know what to do.” The answer is simple: you have to read the manual. Otherwise, you will not know how to do it.
